BLUE AND THE RED.

AFTER THE "BLUE AND THE GRAY." by the flow of Pacific's water, Whence the games of fare have fied, So more does the gambler leiter Playing chocks blue, white and red, No more with the red and the blue The boys at fare will play, come are the checks, red and blue, old Clark has forced them away.

circh in the robing of glory, mamblers, in the gloom of defeat, witnesses telling their story How Clark the gamblers did beat, No more with the red and the blue The boys at fare shall play, done are the crowd kind and true, the law has driven them away.

In silence, in sorrow and tears.
The defeated gamblers go,
In the gloom old Clark appears
Recalling their trials of woe.
No more with the red and the blue
The boys at fare will play,
Old Clark has raised the hue
In Trisce no gambler shall play.

with an equal harshness The heavy sentences fall, The gambler exciting no mercy From Louderback down at the hall, No more with the red and the blue the boys at fare can play.

And so, when Chief Crowley calleth On Clark and his noble train, And, one dusky night he falleth on the Sutter-street fare game. No more with the red and the blue Phe boys at fare will play, old Nobby Clark got his clue, confiscated box, checks and tray.

Boldly, but yet upbraiding.
The desperate raid was done,
Old Nobby's time is fading.
Chief Crowley's term is done.
No more with the red and blue will they bet on the ace, dence and tray.
No more will the boys kind and true
Wear faces brightened and gay.

Farwell, Old Clark, so clever,
For of the tiger now dead,
What! banish our anger? Not never:
Destroyer of checks blue and red
Farewell to the checks blue and red
Fare-box, cards and the tray,
You have stood by us faithful and true
but now we must put you away.

A STEAM JACKASS.

The Most Wonderful Invention of Any Age-A Detailed Description of its Operation and Effect.

A man living near Nashville, Washington county, Illinois, has recently invented an apparatus to take the place of whistles for railroad signais, steamboats, ire-alarms, factory calls and the like. He calls it the "Telephon," but the popular name is the "Steam Jackass." The inventor is a stock-farmer, and has devoted much of his time to raising mules, whose habits and anatomy he appears to have studied carefully. On his farm there was a mule of more than ordinary vocal power, whose voice could be heard a distance of four miles in every direction, when he once got warmed up to his work. The owner computed that if he could set in motion all the air in a circle of eight miles in diameter, or twenty-five miles in circumference, or an area of fifty square miles, or thirty-two thousand acres, a hundred-horse power jackass could, all other things being equal, rival any other noise yet discovered. He established the fact that the power of an ordinary ass is about one-twelfth of an indicated steam horse ered. He established the fact that the power of an ordinary ass is about one-twelfth of an indicated steam horse power. A steam engine of 1,000-horse power would therefore be equal to the power of 12,000 asses. Wherefore, if one ass can fill a circle of eight miles in diameter, 12,000 jackasses or 1,000-horse power jackass would fill a circle of 95,000 miles in diameter. The inventor thought all this over carefully, arriving at the deduction that if he could take nature's vocal apparatus and apply it to a greater power, he could produce a larger and more satisfactory volume of sound Filled with this idea he put the mule to Filled with this idea he put the mule to death, and carefully severed the head from the body. He then injected solu-tions of chloride of zine and arsenic into the veins and arteries of the head and neck, to prevent decay of the flesh. India rubber was dissolved in sulphuric ether, and the solution forced through the traches or wind-pipe, and through the larynx or throat. The ether evaporated, leaving a film or rubber on the membranes, and the injection and evapora-tion were continued until the rubber film was found of sufficient thickness. film was found of sufficient thickness. These organs were then subjected to a vapor of sulubur, heated to 300 degrees, by which process the rubber was vulcanized, its elasticity increased, and the membranes rendered impervious to steam. These preparations completed, a short piece of rubber hose was attached to the wind-pipe and connected with a steam boiler.

steam boiler.
It was a moment of agony to the inventor, as he placed the ass-head in the hands of an assistant, and slowly pulled the valve open; a moment of thrilling the valve open; a moment of thrilling interest. As the steam was turned on, it passed into the wind-pipe, expelling the air and producing a sigh, followed by a groan, a snort, a chuckle, then a violent coughing and sneezing. As a full head of steam was turned on, the most fearful noise, the most frightful guffaw, the most vociferous bray that ever assailed mortal eara, was produced. The lips contracted, disclosing a terrible array of teeth; the features developed a satanic grin; the jaws rose and fell, as the steam crowded the passages, and the ears participated in the general mevement, giving to the head of the ass an animated and excited appearance. The man who was holding the head gazed upon it a moment with dilated eyes, colorless cheeks, knocking knees and protruding longue; then, suddenly losing all interest in the performance, he emigrated. As for the inventor, his success exceeded his most sangaine anticipations. For an instant he contemplated the head, his countenance working with every manifestation or intense delight; then he, too, started, probably to learn the greatest distance to which that voice would penetrate, leaving it still in operation, with all steam on. The head had now got fully warmed up to its work, and that bray went hurtling through the universe. It was an acoustic earthquake; a skyshake; it was a storm, a hurricane of sound, a tornedo, a cyclone of noise; it was a donkey carnival, a jackass Fourth of July. It was the greatest success the world has ever known. interest. As the steam was turned on, it

How to quir Smoring. One who has tried and knows it, recommends the following rule. He says that if this does not cure, nothing else will; and as it costs but little, the reader can lose nothing by making the trial. The rule is: Begin on cigars two for a quarter, and smoke four the first day; then drop to ten cent cigars and smoke five; the next day buy three for a quarter and smoke six; next eight or four for a quarter; then ten five cent cigars, and the following amoke twenty of those two for a nickle, and if you are not cured of smoking, or dead, you needn't try either self-dealal or sulcide, for you are proof against both.

IDIOTS MADE GENIUSES.

[From the British Colomist, Dec. 16th]

There are cases where blows on the head have benefited the brain and produced extraordinary changes for the better. Mabilen was almost an idiot till at the age of twenty he fell down a stone-staircase, fractured his skull and was trepanned. From that moment he became a genius. Dr. Prichard mentioned a case of three brothers who were nearly all idiots. One of them was injured on the head, and from that time brightened up, and is now a successful barrister. Wallenstein, too, they say, was a mere fool till he fell out of a window, and awoke with enlarged capabilities. A patient in an asylum was the victim of many delusions. He was paying off the national debt, going into partnership with Baren Rothschild, and was forming a Lodge of female Freemasons. One day an epileptic patient, irritated at being asked to buy imaginary shares, gave him a tremendous blow on the bridge of the nose. From that time he improved [From the British Colonist, Dec. 16th] him a tremendous blow on the bridge of the nose. From that time he improved rapidly, and he acknowledged that the blow had a sobering effect and had quite knocked the nonsense out of him. There is no doubt that this was the secret of that cruel old remedy for madness, the circulating swing, mentioned favorably by physicians of the last century. This horrible swing was a small box fixed upon a pivot and worked by a winless. The "inflexible" maniac, or the maniac expecting a paroxyam, was strapped in a sitting or recumbent posture. The box expecting a paroxyam, was strapped in a sitting or recumbent posture. The box was then whirled around at the average velocity of a hundred revolutions a minute, and its beneficial effect was supposed to be hightened by reversing the motion every six or eight minutes, and by stopping it occasionally with a sudden jerk. The results of this swing (which occasionally brought on concussion of the brain) were profound and protracted sleep, intense perspiration, mental exhaustion and a not unnatural horror of any recurrence to the same remedy, which left a moral impression that acted as a permanent restraint. That the results were often beneficial we have indisputable evidence.
